

The Case is Altered

Like all hospitality venues, due to the Coronavirus, The Case has had a very disrupted year. The committee have though, used this time to organise maintenance and refurbishment work and prepare our volunteers for working within the Government's ever changing restrictions and regulations.

Although we are now once again open our current trading times are still very much reduced and heavily dependent on weather conditions as we are still only permitted to serve outdoors. Hopefully this will change this month.

We were able to take advantage of Government grants that were available to us and this has helped considerably with our cash flow. Our two part-time employees were furloughed during the first lockdown and although one took the decision to leave the other has recently returned to their normal hours.

As you can imagine many of our volunteers have been hesitant to return to working behind the bar but our current small group have been wonderful and are supporting us almost every weekend.

Non bar volunteers, such as gardeners and maintenance groups have continued to supply their time throughout the past 14 months to help the pub remain a well presented hub of the village.

Looking forward to when all current restrictions are lifted, we, as a responsible and integral part of our small community, will gradually take small steps towards resuming our normal service and hours. Hopefully this approach will ensure the continued safety of all of our customers and volunteers.
